To The Referee:

Under the 1974 Family Education Rights and Privacy Act, the above named applicant will have access to this reference form unless he or she has waived that right.

The person named above is applying for admission to a graduate program in public health. This involves not only an intensive program of graduate study, but commitment to a professional career of serious responsibility as well. You have been selected by the applicant as someone who can be helpful to us in evaluating his or her qualifications and readiness to enter a graduate school.

Sound intelligence and the ability to think clearly and to communicate effectively are vital qualifications. Equally important are basic friendliness and security of personality, exemplified in good relationships with others. Motivation to enter the field of public health should include an understanding of and a commitment to shape population health for future generations.

Although people continue to grow and mature, a person who enters a professional graduate program of public health without a good degree of readiness in all these areas risks failure, and at best, is likely to have a difficult and painful experience. Therefore, you can best help the applicant by being frank about his or her limitations as well as strengths. We ask you to answer the questions on the form as fully as possible. Additional observations by letter are most welcome. In order to facilitate an applicant's opportunity for admission, this form must be returned to the applicant as soon as possible, sealed in an envelope with your signature across the seal of the envelope.

Thank you for your assistance.

Sincerely,

Michael Eriksen
